The key aspects of your learning will be the focus on conflict and displacement. We value a people-centred approach and an emphasis on human security which combines both human rights and human development. The course approaches development as an important security strategy and considers displacement a measure of human security.

Chapter 2 Trends in Human Security and Conflict. During the first five years of the 21st century, the number of armed conflicts around the world was lower than at any time since the 1950s. According to the Human Security Report, the number of battle-related deaths was also at an all-time low, though the number does not reflect civilians deliberately targeted in war.

HUMAN SECURITY IN THEORY AND PRACTICE

Human security is a human right; it refers to the security of people and communities, as opposed to the security of states. Human security recognises that there are several dimensions related to feeling safe, such as freedom from fear, freedom from want, and freedom from indignity. A people-centred approach to security has implications for how we carry out and understand conflict
