The County Durham village of Washington has the distinction of lending its name to the first President, the capital city and a state of the United States of America. The ancestral home of President George Washington was Washington Old Hall, a medieval residence now in the care of the National Trust. This station had a relatively short life and initially enjoyed a sparse service of Stanhope & Tyne (S&T) passenger trains on the route from Chester-le-Street (also known as Durham Turnpike) to ...
